Subj: SBC, AT&T Formally Begin Merger Approval Process

SBC and AT&T today submitted joint filings with the Federal Communications Commission and U.S. Department of Justice, kicking off the formal federal review process aimed at determining that the merger is in the public interest.

In the filings, we identify several public interest benefits. Among them:

The public will benefit from creation of a U.S. communications company with global reach.

The merger will strengthen national security.

The combined company will be an engine of innovation and investment across the country.

The capabilities, reliability and efficiency available to the largest business and government customers should flow to residential and small business customers.

In addition, the filings demonstrate that the merger will help advance competition by creating a more effective, more responsive and more innovative company better able to serve the needs of consumers and business customers.

So far, more than 260 consumer, business and civic organizations, as well as state and federal elected officials, have announced their support for the merger.
