Subject: Two Successful Paths for our Future

Dear Colleague,

By now you've seen the big announcement we've just made, regarding the sale of our Developed Markets business to Mylan. I'd like to offer some more detail from the EPD perspective.

First, I want to acknowledge that we're announcing another large change following a number of transitions we've all experienced over the past several years. Indeed, in our fast-evolving industry, managing change has become the new normal and part of everyday business. Earlier this year we revised our internal theme to "Transforming Now to Fuel Our Future" to reflect our need to adapt to, and even get ahead of, these changes to ensure the best future for our business. I believe that this announcement is completely in line with this philosophy and sets both Developed and Emerging Markets up well for their next steps.

Our colleagues in Developed Markets have made great strides in the past year and I want to thank them for these efforts. Our strategy to align our internal organizational structure into businesses more focused on developed and emerging markets was on target, and their excellent work, under the leadership of Jean-Yves Pavée, was making real progress and moving us in the right direction. But the road ahead was still a very long one, and would have kept both our Developed and Emerging Markets businesses from achieving their goals as quickly and efficiently as they will be able to with this transaction. This move is good for both of our businesses going forward, putting them on successful paths for their futures.

Now, this transaction won't close until early next year. In the meantime, we have a lot of work to do, and we have commitments to honor. First and foremost, patients around the world are counting on us to continue producing and delivering the quality products they rely on. We also need to deliver on our plan for 2014. There will be a dedicated team working through the details of the transition. It's imperative that the rest of EPD remain focused on ongoing work, goals and priorities. This is critical for the sake of both businesses. We want our Developed Markets team to join Mylan as a high-performing unit that will be recognized as a great enhancement to their business. And, of course, we need to keep building our ongoing EPD business consistent with our ambitions. As Miles made clear, branded generics remain core to Abbott's growth strategy.

EPD leadership will be meeting soon and will keep you informed as this process moves forward; and you'll be hearing from Mylan leadership when the time is right. As you'll see, they're a strong organization that shares our commitment to patients and high performance. Mylan will be a good home to our developed markets business, and will accelerate its success. We'll keep you informed as this process moves forward.

Clearly, I second Miles' sentiment that this is a difficult decision. We've worked hard to build the Developed Markets business for future growth. It was the success of those efforts that make this business attractive to Mylan. I will personally miss so many colleagues from this great group. But I'm happy to know that they'll be joining an excellent company that will help strengthen their business—and that our resulting EPD will also be better able to compete, succeed, and build a great future.

Thanks and best regards,

For Immediate Release

Abbott to Sell its Developed Markets Branded Generics Pharmaceuticals Business to Mylan

Abbott will retain its branded generics pharmaceuticals business in emerging markets

Transaction expected to positively impact Abbott's sales and ongoing earnings-per-share growth rates

ABBOTT PARK, Ill., July 14, 2014 Abbott announced today that it will sell its developed markets branded generics pharmaceuticals business to Mylan for equity ownership of a newly formed entity that will combine Mylan's existing business and Abbott's developed markets pharmaceuticals business, and will be a publicly traded company. This represents a value of approximately $5.3 billion based on Mylan's closing stock price on Friday. The developed markets portion of this business generated approximately $2 billion in sales in 2013. Abbott will retain its branded generics pharmaceuticals business and products in emerging markets. Abbott also retains its other businesses and products in developed markets.

This transaction provides Abbott with additional strategic flexibility as we continue to actively manage and shape our portfolio, reflecting our commitment to long-term, durable growth, said Miles D. White, chairman and chief executive officer, Abbott. Our branded generics pharmaceuticals business will focus on emerging markets, where demographic changes and increasing access to healthcare are expected to drive sustainable growth.

Abbott's Branded Generics Pharmaceuticals Business

Following the closing of the transaction, Abbott's branded generics pharmaceuticals business will focus in emerging geographies where demographics and growing healthcare systems are combining to create an increased rate of patient access to healthcare and where the majority of healthcare products are paid for by the consumer. The branded generics business that will remain with Abbott generated 2013 sales of $2.9 billion and is expected to have a sales growth rate in the upper-single to double digits.

Transaction Details and Financial Terms

Under the terms of the agreement, Abbott will sell its developed markets branded generics pharmaceuticals business to Mylan for 105 million shares or approximately 21 percent, on a fully diluted basis, of a newly formed entity that will combine Mylan's existing business and Abbott's developed markets pharmaceuticals business, and will be a publicly traded company.

The business to be sold operates in Europe, Japan, Canada, Australia and New Zealand and includes approximately 3,800 employees. It includes a broad portfolio of medicines, as well as manufacturing facilities in France and Japan. Abbott will retain its product portfolio and manufacturing facilities in other geographies as well as its manufacturing facilities in the Netherlands, Germany and Canada.

Following the transaction, which is expected to close in the first quarter of 2015, Abbott expects that its sales growth rate will be 100 basis points higher, and the growth rate of its ongoing net income will be in excess of 200 basis points higher. The ongoing net income associated with Abbott's developed markets pharmaceuticals business is expected to be approximately $0.22 per share in 2015. Accordingly, Abbott's ongoing earnings per share from continuing operations is expected to be lower following the close of this transaction by this amount.

Abbott does not expect to be a long-term shareholder in Mylan and plans ultimately to redeploy the net proceeds from this transaction to opportunities that would be accretive to earnings over time.

In May, Abbott announced the acquisition of the Latin American pharmaceutical company CFR Pharmaceuticals, which is expected to be approximately $0.07 accretive to Abbott's ongoing earnings per share in 2015.

Abbott expects to report its developed markets branded generics pharmaceuticals business as Discontinued Operations beginning in the third quarter 2014.

Morgan Stanley advised Abbott on the transaction.
