Subject: Lincoln Financial Jefferson Pilot Merger

Last Monday we announced exciting and historic plans for Lincoln Financial and Jefferson Pilot to combine forces. Today, we look forward to our companies' future together. This combination provides a compelling opportunity for growth, and we couldn't be more excited to begin planning for the integration of our operations. Together we are creating one of the most powerful insurance and financial services companies in the nation.

A commitment to excellence

Both Lincoln Financial and Jefferson Pilot have performance-based cultures that benefit from century-long commitments to excellence. Moving forward, we will continue to be a premier provider of life insurance, annuity, and investment products. Our aim is to be the choice for helping people attain retirement income security by providing financial advisors with creative solutions and expert support.

The expanded product and distribution capabilities of the combined organization, enhanced by the operational efficiencies made possible by our increased scale, will make Lincoln Financial a powerhouse in the insurance and financial services industry. Employees will be part of a larger, more dynamic enterprise with greater resources and significant growth potential.

Both companies have a strong track record of successful life insurance company integrations, and we are confident that our shared values and commitment to excellence will help us realize our exciting vision for the combined organization.

Organizational integration

Many of you have shared questions already, and we look forward to the opportunity to talk with you more about the issues that are important to you. We recognize that some of the changes announced with this merger may be unsettling for some people. We won't have all the questions answered in the next few weeks, but we know broadly, due to the nature of integrating operations, that there will be changes that will result in some consolidations across both organizations. When we review the combined organization, we will look for opportunities to eliminate functional redundancies and gain operating efficiencies. When we make decisions, we will announce them as quickly and thoughtfully as we can. Since we have not yet begun integration planning, we do not have any specific information today about jobs. We intend to maintain a significant presence in each of our key cities. Most importantly, we know that when we are successful in integrating our companies, we will be better positioned to grow and create more opportunities.

We expect to be able to outline the process for integration, including the teams of people who will be involved and key milestones, over the next several weeks. Just as the combined senior management team draws on key talent from both organizations, so, too, will our integration teams. The integration steering committee, comprising leaders of both organizations (Dennis Glass, chair, Priscilla Brown, Fred Crawford, Chuck Cornelio, Bob Dineen, Jude Driscoll, Mark Konen, Barb Kowalczyk, Warren May, Beth Reeves, Wes Thompson), held its first meeting on Monday. As leaders for the combined organization are selected and new divisions defined, we will announce them. But, since we will continue to operate as two independent companies until the merger is completed, we will not integrate operations until after the close of the transaction, which we expect to occur at the end of the first quarter of 2006. The timing for both the integration planning work and the closing are subject to certain regulatory and shareholder approvals.

Ongoing communication

Over the next few weeks, we will be traveling together to each of our major locations to introduce ourselves to those of you who may not know one of us yet, and to share our enthusiasm and optimism for the future of our combined company. We have scheduled these Town Hall meetings for all of our key cities to give you an opportunity to ask us questions face-to-face, and we look forward to talking with you. Please see the schedule of meetings below.

In addition to these meetings, we will continue to provide regular updates via email and our employee web sites over the coming months as our integration plans unfold. If you have questions, we encourage you to share them with your manager. Although we cannot guarantee a personal response to all of the emails we receive, we will respond to questions in our regular updates.

Thank you in advance for your optimism and continued commitment to excellence as we embark on this exciting journey together.
