ZIONS BANCORPORATION WILL RESUBMIT CAPITAL PLAN

SALT LAKE CITY, March 20, 2014 Under the results published today by the Federal Reserve, under the hypothetical severely adverse economic stress scenario in the Dodd-Frank Act Stress Test (DFAST) run by the Federal Reserve, Zions Bancorporation's (NASDAQ: ZION) capital ratios would not have met the minimum requirements under the Federal Reserve's capital adequacy rules. Zions announced today that, based upon an initial review of the Federal Reserve's publication, Zions' DFAST results were worse than Zions had projected primarily because of the following factors:

- 1) Significantly higher commercial real estate losses,
- 2) Significantly greater risk-weighted assets, and
- 3) Lower pre-tax, pre-provision net revenue.

Zions also notes that its original submission to the Federal Reserve occurred prior to the sale of certain collateralized debt obligation securities (CDOs) in January and February 2014, which sales also resulted in a substantial reduction in risk.

As a result of the Federal Reserve's stress tests, Zions will resubmit its capital plan to the Federal Reserve and anticipates that the resubmission will contain additional actions that will further reduce risk and/or increase its common equity capital sufficient to cause Zions' capital ratios to meet or exceed the minimum capital ratios under the Federal Reserve's hypothetical severely adverse economic stress scenario.
