Dear Colleagues,

On June 15, 2014, Medtronic and Covidien publicly announced Medtronic's intent to acquire Covidien, a global healthcare technology and medical supplies provider. Since then, Medtronic executive leaders have been on the road meeting with hundreds of Medtronic employees to discuss these developments and field employee questions.

As you can imagine, at this stage, there are more questions than we are able to address on an individual basis. I want to assure you that we hear you. The Medtronic leadership team is committed to keeping employees informed about the Covidien acquisition, what it means for you, as well as how you can help.

One common question we've received from employees is, What are the capital gains tax implications for Medtronic shareholders as a result of this transaction? We have mentioned in internal and external communications that Medtronic shareholders may have to pay capital gains taxes as a result of this transaction. However, there is no one simple answer because taxes vary based on many different individual parameters. We are developing comprehensive information for employees to ensure they receive accurate details about any tax implications. Look for further details from our HR Global Rewards Team this week, including opportunities to participate in interactive sessions and ask questions.

Also coming soon is an online portal to keep you informed about the Covidien acquisition. This information portal will be updated regularly and will include frequently asked questions and answers. At the same time, questions will remain in many areas as the integration team works through the details. As decisions are made, our goal is to keep you well informed as we move toward closing this deal in late 2014 or early 2015 calendar year.

I appreciate your patience as we continue to communicate about the Covidien acquisition. In the meantime, I encourage you to visit www.globalmedtechleader.com, our external portal, for information about this transaction.

Thank you for your level of engagement in this exciting change for Medtronic.

Regards,

Carol Surface

Chief Human Resources Officer
