On October 24th, 2012, the South African Competition Commission announced that it had referred a case involving information sharing in the pricing of diesel in the commercial sector in South Africa to the South African Competition Tribunal for adjudication (the "Competition Commission Statement"). The Competition Commission Statement states that the case names Sasol, among several other oil companies, as a respondent. The case alleges that (i) the oil companies agreed to use the Wholesale List Selling Price published by the Department of Energy as the basis for pricing diesel to commercial customers, alternatively that there was a concerted practice amongst the oil companies to do so; and (ii) the sharing of disaggregated and later aggregated volume information by the oil companies (by product, magisterial district and customer segment), through the South African Petroleum Industry Association, resulted in the oil companies fixing prices, and allocating regions and customers. In particular, the Competition Commission alleges that the sharing of volume information had the result that the oil companies did not discount as aggressively as they should have, and did not enter particular regions or pursue customers of one another. Commission is seeking damages of up to 10% of Sasol's consolidated revenue in and exports from South Africa for the last fiscal year, which is the maximum fine that may be levied under South African competition laws. On October 24, 2012, Sasol issued the following response to the Competition Commission statement: Sasol has noted today's media statement from the Competition Commission regarding the referral of its liquid fuels industry investigation to the Competition Tribunal. Sasol began engaging and cooperating with the Competition Commission in 2008, as part of the company's competition law compliance review, which proactively analysed business activities across the Sasol group. Sasol's engagement with the Competition Commission preceded the authority's initiation of its investigation into the liquid fuels industry. Sasol concluded its internal competition law compliance review in 2010 and at the close of the review, no evidence was found to support the allegations we note in the Commission's media statement. Sasol's opinion, at the time, was informed by the rigorous internal competition law compliance review process, as well as legal opinion and expert economic analysis. Sasol is currently awaiting a copy of the referral to study it in detail.
