Portfolio Review

The market continued to decline in May as the Taiwan Stock Exchange Index (TAIEX) fell 2.6% in US dollar terms during the month after April 's 7% decline. The market 's weakness in May was directly attributable to the oil industry, as oil prices rose to over $40 a barrel with no sign of leveling off. As a result, concerns about inflation mounted, and we saw increasing risk aversion among investors as market turnover dropped 40% from April 's level. Net sales by foreign investors amounted to NT$76 billion in May, reflecting liquidity withdrawal in the face of increased uncertainties.

The technology sector performed poorly this month, with Thin Film Transistor-Liquid Crystal Display (TFT-LCD) related companies being hit by strong selling pressure from institutional investors looking to reduce their exposure in the technology sector. Foundries suffered for the same reason and underperformed the overall market, but PC-related companies outperformed, as they are not widely owned by institutional investors.

We believe that the current pace of economic growth is unlikely to be sustained with China determined to slow the growth of its economy and U.S. rate hikes seemingly imminent. However, the market may have overly discounted the upcoming slowdown, especially where heightened oil prices made headlines and dampened investor 's confidence. With corporate profit growth remaining healthy and valuations reaching attractive levels, we expect that the market may soon hit bottom and then begin to climb in the coming months.

*Returns for the Fund are historical total returns that reflect changes in net asset value per share during each period and assume that dividends and capital gains, if any, were reinvested. Returns for the TAIEX are not total returns and reflect only changes in share price but do not assume that cash dividends, if any, were reinvested, and thus are not strictly comparable to the Fund returns. Past performance is not indicative of future results of the Fund. Returns are annualized, except for periods of less than one year which are not annualized.

Due to a U.S. holiday on May 31st, The Taiwan Fund, Inc. total returns are through May 28th, while the TAIEX returns are through May 31st.

 The Fund's fiscal year commences on September 1.
