PART III NARRATIVE

State below in reasonable detail why Forms 10-K, 20-F, 11-K, 10-Q, N-SAR, N-CSR, or the transition report or portion thereof, could not be filed within the prescribed time period.

OCA, Inc. (the Company) was unable to file its Form 10-K by March 16, 2005 because the Company has not yet completed the closing procedures required to prepare and finalize its annual financial statements or its assessment of internal control over financial reporting under Section 404 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (Section 404). The Company is reviewing its accounting for leases and its depreciation and capitalization of leasehold improvements, equipment and other fixed assets. In addition, the Company is reviewing the appropriateness of capitalization of startup costs and certain balance sheet accounts for its Japanese subsidiary. The Company has identified certain errors and potential errors related to 2004 and prior years, but has not completed its review or made a final determination about the impact of any adjustments or whether these errors or potential errors are material to warrant a restatement of any previously issued financial statements.

Under Securities and Exchange Commission rules adopted under Section 404 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, the management assessment and attestation report are required to be included in the Company's 2004 Form 10-K. Management is not permitted to conclude that the Company's internal controls are effective if management identifies one or more material weaknesses, and the attestation report of the independent registered public accounting firm would contain an adverse opinion with respect to the effectiveness of the Company's internal control over financial reporting. A material weakness is a significant deficiency, or combination of significant deficiencies, that results in more than a remote likelihood that a material misstatement of the annual or interim financial statements will not be prevented or detected. A significant deficiency is a control deficiency, or combination of control deficiencies, that adversely affects the company's ability to initiate, authorize, record, process or report external financial data reliably in accordance with GAAP such that there is more than a remote likelihood that a misstatement of annual or interim financial statements that is more than inconsequential will not be prevented or detected. Management has not yet completed its assessment of internal controls under Section 404, but has identified certain significant deficiencies, including internal controls relating to the accounts currently being reviewed by the Company. Management has not yet determined whether these significant deficiencies constitute material weaknesses individually or in the aggregate; however, the Company currently believes that it is probable that one or more of these significant deficiencies will be determined to be a material weaknesses. In addition, if the Company were to restate financial statements for prior periods, management would conclude that there was a material weakness.

EXHIBIT A

The Company has not yet completed its annual closing procedures and is unable to provide a reasonable estimate of its 2004 results of operations at this time. As previously reported, effective January 1, 2004, the Company adopted, as required, the provisions of Financial Accounting Standards Board Interpretation No. 46R, Consolidation of Variable Interest Entities an Interpretation of ARB No. 51 (FIN 46R). Pursuant to FIN 46R, the Company consolidates the assets, liabilities, equity and financial results of its affiliated practices, with certain exceptions, for financial reporting purposes effective January 1, 2004. This has resulted in significant changes in the Company's accounting policies and financial reporting, which are described in the Company's Quarterly Reports on Form 10-Q for the first, second and third quarters of 2004. Among other things, effective January 1, 2004, the Company records patient revenue under patient contracts between affiliated practices and their patients, rather than fee revenue representing the Company's service fees, and the portion of patient revenue that is retained by practitioners of affiliated practices is now reflected as an expense in the Company's consolidated statements of income (loss). The changes in accounting under FIN 46R resulted in a cumulative effect of change in accounting principle charge of approximately $74.7 million (net of an income tax benefit of $41.4 million), which was recorded during the first quarter of 2004. The financial statements to be included in the Company's Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2004 will reflect the Company's adoption of FIN 46R and associated changes in accounting effective January 1, 2004. The Company also anticipates that its results of operations for the year ended December 31, 2004 will reflect non-cash charges to increase the allowance for assets associated with inactive practices, including a previously announced charge of $13.5 million during the nine months ended September 30, 2004, as well as losses on sale of assets in connection with the buyouts by certain affiliated practices of their service agreements, including a previously announced loss of $3.3 million during the nine months ended September 30, 2004. The Company has not yet completed its review of its accounting for leases and its depreciation and capitalization of leasehold improvements, equipment and other fixed assets. The Company is also continuing to review the appropriateness of capitalization of startup costs and certain balance sheet accounts for its Japanese subsidiary, as well as certain errors and potential errors which the Company has identified related to 2004 and prior years. Therefore, at this time, the Company is not able to estimate the impact of any adjustments or whether these errors or potential errors are material to warrant a restatement of any previously issued financial statements.
