Matsushita Announces New Group Structure

Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Ltd. (MEI [NYSE symbol: MC]), best known for its Panasonic brand name, announced today that it has entered into a basic agreement with Matsushita Electric Works, Ltd. (MEW) to unify the management strategies of the two companies by increasing its capital ownership of MEW. Based on common management philosophies and strategies, the two companies will combine their respective strengths to form a new Matsushita Group, augmenting their considerable resources as top global companies.

On January 9, 2004, MEI and MEW will jointly establish a Collaboration Committee to discuss the formation of an optimized structure toward maximizing corporate value for the entire Matsushita Group. Specifically, this committee will discuss policies aimed at enhancing operations from a customer's point of view. The companies expect unified management strategies will further enhance growth and increase productivity in the fields of home appliances, household equipment, construction materials, electric equipment, lighting, home and building networks, environment-related businesses, healthcare, and medical equipment.

To achieve smooth collaboration, MEI will increase its capital ownership of MEW. MEI, at a meeting of its Board of Directors held today, resolved to acquire additional shares of MEW amounting to a total of 51% ownership of MEW shares. At a meeting of the Board of Directors of MEW, also held today, MEW confirmed its intent to support the proposed acquisition by MEI of such additional shares by means of tender offer.

Since 1935, when MEW became a separate company from MEI by spinning off a part of MEI's business, both companies have maintained a cooperative relationship, while expanding their respective businesses independently based on separate strategies. However, under increasingly intense global competition, both companies are faced with changing consumer demand for both products and services in networkable appliances and environmentally-friendly product areas. It is, therefore, more important than ever for the Matsushita Group to concentrate its resources to effectively respond to the needs of a global market.

For the future, MEI and MEW will take advantage of synergy effects created by combining MEI's extensive experience in various fields ranging from components and devices, through finished products and services, with MEW's strength in home and living environment areas. By combining management resources, MEI and MEW will be able to provide customers with total solutions for comfortable living environments in consumer and industrial markets. Furthermore, the two companies aim to become global leaders by accelerating the establishment of new businesses in the fields of networkable products for the home and office, environment-related businesses, and healthcare and medical equipment.

Matsushita Electric Industrial Announces Tender Offer
for Shares of Matsushita Electric Works

Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Ltd. (MEI [NYSE symbol: MC]), best known for its Panasonic brand name, announced that its Board of Directors today resolved to acquire additional shares of Matsushita Electric Works, Ltd. (MEW) by means of a tender offer, upon signing a basic agreement between MEI and MEW.

Details of the tender offer are as follows:

1. Purposes of initiating tender offer

Currently, both MEI and MEW operate in uncertain business environments, characterized by slow growth in domestic demand, including consumer spending, and intensifying global price competition. MEI also expects that global competition in markets in which it operates will be further accelerated in the future.

Although MEI and MEW, the principal companies in the Matsushita group, have a long history of cooperation in various business areas, the two companies have expanded their operations independently, based on separate strategies developed by each of the two companies. In today's business environment, however, the two companies believe that establishing an optimum operating structure from a customer's viewpoint is essential in creating new value as a leading global group that offers solutions for comfortable living, thus increasing customer satisfaction, as well as overall corporate value.

This customer-oriented, optimum group structure will be established by combining MEI's extensive management resources in the areas of digital networking, home appliances, components and devices, and R&D, with MEW's considerable expertise in the living environments field. Furthermore, in addressing such issues as realization of the much-anticipated ubiquitous networking society, and coexistence with the environment, MEI and MEW believe they can take advantage of synergy effects to be achieved by combining the management resources of both companies.

Meanwhile, the increased collaboration is also expected to facilitate creation of new growth opportunities and improved productivity in a number of business areas. MEI and MEW intend to unite groupwide efforts in R&D, manufacturing and sales, and work to enhance efficiency, while strengthening product development capabilities and cost competitiveness. Through these initiatives, the two companies will strive to achieve greater growth in such areas as home appliances, household equipment & building products, electrical construction materials, lighting, home & building information networks, environment-related systems, and healthcare & medical equipment, thereby solidifying the group's position as a leading global company.

MEI and MEW entered into a basic agreement today for the purpose of advancing comprehensive collaboration between the two companies. Based on this basic agreement, the two companies will establish a joint Collaboration Committee on January 9, 2004 to discuss details regarding mutual business cooperation and possible areas of synergy.
