On September 5, 2006, Robert Brunck, Chairman and CEO of Compagnie Générale de Géophysique, sent the following communication, in the English and French languages, to the employees of CGG.

Paris, September 5th, 2006

Dear Fellow Employee,

Today we are pleased to announce that Compagnie Générale de Géophysique has entered into a merger agreement with Houston-based company Veritas to create a leading global geophysical services and equipment company. This announcement coincides with the publication of a very good set of results for our company for the first semester: thanks to you all, the company has again performed well, posting a strong revenue growth and tripling its operational margin in a year, and is very well positioned to take advantage of a strong business environment.

This is a historical day for CGG: this proposed transaction, in combination with our solid balance sheet and enhanced profitability, will allow us to take advantage of the growth prospects in our sector and deliver on our key strategic objectives.

As you all know, it has always been important for us to maintain our leadership and to expand our technological know-how. This combination will allow us to better anticipate the market needs and reinforce our relationships with key customers.

Veritas, a global provider of integrated geophysical information and services, is the perfect fit to achieve those goals. The combination is complementary in terms of businesses, geographies and clients. By combining the strengths of both companies, we will be able to provide a broader variety of seismic services, while also enjoying a strong position in geophysical equipment through Sercel, across all markets.

The true potential of this new group is our ability to combine your talents with Veritas's. The combined company will operate under the name of CGG-Veritas, which reflects the importance of both companies to the success of this combination.

CGG-Veritas, your new group, will operate the world's leading seismic fleet with 20 vessels, including 14 high capacity 3D vessels, and will have a global footprint, with land activity in both Western and Eastern Hemispheres. In multi-client services, the new group will benefit from the combination, recent vintage and well-positioned seismic data libraries. In data processing, CGG and Veritas's respective positions will also provide the new group with the opportunity to create the reference in the sector.

This transaction occurs in a fast growing market and will create ample opportunities for employees of both companies. With a combined workforce of 7000 staff operating worldwide, including Sercel, CGG-Veritas will continue to focus on innovation and excellence, relying on the talents and commitment of all employees in all countries, in order to create the new industry benchmark for seismic services and products.

The new board of directors will include representatives from both CGG and Veritas, reflecting the combined shareholder base. As Chairman and CEO, I shall lead CGG-Veritas, which will be headquartered in Paris. Services will operate under the helm of Christophe Pettenati-Auziere. The projected organization is based on two regional units reporting to him: Western Hemisphere, headed by Tim Wells, and Eastern Hemisphere, headed by Luc Benoit-Cattin. In addition, three worldwide transverse product lines – namely land, offshore and processing – will ensure global coherence and homogeneity of our operating and technological approach. Sercel’s conduct of business remains unchanged as a result of this merger.

This transaction is subject to shareholder and regulatory approvals, however we expect it to close by the end of the year. We will do our best to keep you updated on transaction developments through specific meetings, and in that respect with information on the website and intranet. You will find on our website the press release announcing this transaction, as well as our presentation to investors and analysts. You will also find a list of frequently asked questions.

Finally, on behalf of the Board and the senior management team, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you all for your continued dedication and commitment to our company. It is your contribution, mostly hard work, that has allowed us to deliver continuous excellence to our customers and shareholders. I look forward to building together on that success as we move forward with this transaction.

Having had the opportunity to meet recently you at the 75th anniversary celebration, I am very glad that this new step in our corporate history will position our company as the leader of the seismic industry. CGG-Veritas will for sure attract new talents and provide our employees with ever more exciting career development and personal fulfilment.

Sincerely yours,

Robert Brunck

Chairman and CEO
