As an ADC leader, we are providing you with updates your employees MUST know to make this combination a success. For background information on the ADC Andrew combination, click HERE.

YOUR RESPONSIBILITY Share this IMPORTANT information with your employees. This Fast Facts sheet will assist you in doing so.

UPDATES

Integration teams are working toward an effective combination for Day One (defined as the day the deal between ADC and Andrew closes). Teams are driving clarity between ADC and Andrew to drive aggressive deadlines, creating speed to value. To date, a total of 96 sub-teams are mobilized to achieve the combination's value. The proposed deal close is anticipated for the September to October timeframe, pending shareowner approval.

We will be translating the employee bulletins and Fast Facts sheets into Chinese, German and Spanish. To access translated materials, visit the ADC Andrew Integration Community available through the front page of Broadway and click on the appropriate document. Note there is a three- to five-day delay in posting translated documents.

STATUS REPORT

(Reports on events or decisions that have been made since the last Fast Facts sheet.)

A shareowner website (www.adcandrewmerger.com) has been developed and provides combination-related information needed for our shareowners to make an informed decision.

A website that integration team members from both ADC and Andrew can access has also been developed. This site supports the teams in efficiently maintaining their documentation and streamlining communication with others directly involved in the integration planning process.

Core Integration Team charters have been defined and approved. Charters ensure each team understands its objectives and that all charters will comprehensively and efficiently enable us to plan for a successful integration.

Core teams are also identifying all critical Day One imperatives.

ADC and Andrew Senior Executive Team Review Session takes place. Discussion topics included a status update on planning and progress. The executive team reviewed and refined recommendations pertaining to Day One imperatives.

The executive team also reconfirmed its commitment to providing all employees with reporting structures on Day One.

QUESTIONS

ADC is committed to answering questions employees have regarding the combination of ADC and Andrew.

Encourage your team members to raise questions through the various avenues available to them, including the ADC Andrew Integration website available on Broadway or through a core team member. If you receive questions from your team and would like assistance in providing an answer, please utilize these avenues as well.

Question: When will the ADC shareowners vote on the Andrew deal?

Answer: ADC shareowners will vote at a shareowner meeting on a yet to be determined date. Once a date is determined and approved, we will communicate it to you via the ADC Andrew Integration Bulletin.

Question: How do we plan to integrate the two companies' SAP systems?

Answer: A critical decision like this requires careful study, which is what the I.T. Applications team, one of our many integration teams, is currently working on. The recommendation will consider current system functionality and future system capabilities that are needed to support the vision of our combined company.

Currently, team members are considering numerous integration options, some of which may include: (1) creating a new version of the system and migrating data from both companies into it; (2) migrating Andrew's data into ADC's system; or (3) migrating ADC's data into Andrew's system.

In the end, the team is working vigorously to ensure that on Day One, ADC Andrew can operate with no disruption in its networks, telecommunications, and business and engineering applications. Compared against previous business dealings, ADC's and Andrew's SAP systems are fairly similar. Both of us use the same SAP release level, 4.6c, and each system is fairly sophisticated, easing system integration post-close.

WHAT CAN YOU DO TO HELP YOUR TEAM THROUGH THIS TIME OF CHANGE?

The old adage.....

People don't care how much you know, until they know how much you care.

..... certainly comes into play when organizations adjust the status quo. The fact is employee trust levels typically drop during change. People become more self-protective. Translation: you have to be invested in your people if you want them to be invested in ADC. Commitment is a two-way street.

Find a way to be fiercely committed in helping your people succeed in their changing roles and responsibilities. Commit to being candid, honest and positive in your communications with them during this time. Make it clear that they can count on you to do whatever is possible on their behalf. Leave no doubt about your dedication to the change effort, the team and its people.

We're better, Connected!

Here are some additional ways to let people know you care:

Clearly explain the importance and rationale for the change state the business case; let people know why you personally support the change.

Identify who else in the organization is behind the initiative and why; invite these individuals to speak with your team.

Let employees know how the change will impact them answer the What's in it for me? question.

Encourage people to openly express how they feel about the change; make it safe to experience a wide variety of emotions.

Highlight the roles, processes or systems that will not be affected by the change; it is often helpful for people to know what will remain as is.

Create opportunities for people to learn together to grow team skills, abilities and confidence.

REMINDER

1. Employees should remain extremely vigilant in the support we provide to our customers during this time between announcement and close of the proposed merger.
2. Don't get distracted. Teamwork will be essential.
3. STAY FOCUSED on the business so we can successfully execute on our Q3 & Q4 goals and meet the needs and demands of our customers.
4. We MUST remain an Andrew competitor until deal close, meaning business as usual.
